

CHAOS

the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased by 50% (Mental Health Foundation 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of people with mental health problems, and the importance of providing them with appropriate services. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the development of mental health services, the establishment of mental health trusts, and the implementation of mental health legislation.

The purpose of this paper is to review the current state of mental health services in the UK, and to discuss the challenges facing mental health services in the future. The paper will first review the current state of mental health services in the UK, and then discuss the challenges facing mental health services in the future.

The current state of mental health services in the UK is characterized by a number of challenges. These include a growing demand for services, a shortage of resources, and a need for more effective services.

The growing demand for services is a result of a number of factors, including an increase in the number of people with mental health problems, and a growing awareness of the need for services. The shortage of resources is a result of a number of factors, including a shortage of staff, and a shortage of funding.

The need for more effective services is a result of a number of factors, including a need for more effective treatment, and a need for more effective support. The challenges facing mental health services in the future are therefore significant.

There are a number of initiatives that are being implemented to address these challenges. These include the development of mental health services, the establishment of mental health trusts, and the implementation of mental health legislation.

The development of mental health services is a key initiative. This involves the development of new services, and the improvement of existing services. The establishment of mental health trusts is another key initiative. This involves the establishment of new trusts, and the improvement of existing trusts.

The implementation of mental health legislation is another key initiative. This involves the implementation of new legislation, and the improvement of existing legislation. The challenges facing mental health services in the future are therefore significant.

the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased by 50% (Mental Health Foundation 1999). The prevalence of mental health problems has increased in the general population, and the incidence of mental health problems has increased in the prison population.

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the mental health needs of prisoners. The Department of Health (2000) has published a strategy for mental health services, which includes a commitment to improve the mental health of prisoners. The Department of Health (2000) has also published a strategy for mental health services, which includes a commitment to improve the mental health of prisoners. For everything there is a season and a time for every matter under heaven:

a time to be born, and a time to die;

a time to plant, and a time to pluck up what is planted;

a time to kill, and a time to heal;

a time to break down, and a time to build up;

a time to weep, and a time to laugh;

a time to mourn, and a time to dance;

a time to cast away stones, and a time to gather stones
together;

a time to embrace, and a time to refrain from embracing;

a time to seek, and a time to lose;

a time to keep, and a time to cast away;

a time to rend, and a time to sew;

a time to keep silence, and a time to speak;

a time to love, and a time to hate;

a time for war, and a time for peace.

What gain has the worker from his toil?

The splendor of an autumn day
With nature on display.
Mere man attempts with brush and quill
Its brilliance to convey.

"Autumn" Donald Jones

Fire 'em up!

Twas the night before Homecoming,
When all round the fire,
All the bomber fans were cheering,
To win was our desire.

Homecoming Queen Julie Brooks

Oh, what to our wondering eyes should appear,
But our lovely queen candidates not shedding a tear.
When Chris announced the winner with a smiling look,
I knew in a moment it must be Julie Brooks,
And then, in a twinkling, the dedication began,
This year Hank Kresler was our honored man.
Since the Bombers he had faithfully backed,
In appreciation, he received a plaque.

Victory

The bombers were gathered on the field with care,
In hopes that the refs would be fair.
The Rebels were nestled all snug on their bench,
While visions of winning danced in their heads.
But Davisson knew that our team was tuff,
And he didn't mess around with the South Newton stuff.

From beginning to end, we gave all we had;
And we won by a score that wasn't too bad.

CHAOS

This yearbook is indebted to many people. Without the assistance and help of those who were willing to give their time and effort, this year's publication of the CHAOS would not be possible. There is a special thanks to be given to Mr. Wayne Erickson, our photographer, and to Mr. Roberts, our principal, for their support and advice. We also wish to give a very special thank you to Miss Plunkett, our sponsor.

Mary M. Henry, Editor

Time goes, you say ? Ah no!
Alas, Time stays, we go.

Henry Austin Dobson

the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased by 50% (Mental Health Foundation 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of people with mental health problems, and the importance of the role of the community. The National Health Service (NHS) has a commitment to the development of community mental health teams, and the Department of Health has published a strategy for mental health care (Department of Health 1999). The strategy states that the aim is to provide a range of services to meet the needs of people with mental health problems, and to ensure that the services are accessible to all. The strategy also states that the services should be based on the needs of the community, and should be developed in partnership with the community.

The strategy also states that the services should be based on the needs of the community, and should be developed in partnership with the community. This increase has been driven by a number of factors, including the growth of the public sector, the increasing participation of people from ethnic minorities in the workforce, and the increasing demand for public services.

The public sector has also become a major employer of people from the lower socio-economic classes. In 1980, people from the lower socio-economic classes made up 10% of the public sector workforce, and by 1995, this figure had risen to 20%. This increase has been driven by a number of factors, including the growth of the public sector, the increasing participation of people from the lower socio-economic classes in the workforce, and the increasing demand for public services.

The public sector has also become a major employer of people with low qualifications. In 1980, people with low qualifications made up 10% of the public sector workforce, and by 1995, this figure had risen to 20%. This increase has been driven by a number of factors, including the growth of the public sector, the increasing participation of people with low qualifications in the workforce, and the increasing demand for public services.

The public sector has also become a major employer of people with low earnings. In 1980, people with low earnings made up 10% of the public sector workforce, and by 1995, this figure had risen to 20%. This increase has been driven by a number of factors, including the growth of the public sector, the increasing participation of people with low earnings in the workforce, and the increasing demand for public services.

The public sector has also become a major employer of people with low job satisfaction. In 1980, people with low job satisfaction made up 10% of the public sector workforce, and by 1995, this figure had risen to 20%. This increase has been driven by a number of factors, including the growth of the public sector, the increasing participation of people with low job satisfaction in the workforce, and the increasing demand for public services.

The public sector has also become a major employer of people with low commitment. In 1980, people with low commitment made up 10% of the public sector workforce, and by 1995, this figure had risen to 20%. This increase has been driven by a number of factors, including the growth of the public sector, the increasing participation of people with low commitment in the workforce, and the increasing demand for public services.
